NOMINATIONS COMING IN RAPIDLY IN BIG SUBSCRIPTION DRIVE

Subscriptions Count More Votes Now—Early Workers Have Advantage

The mammoth popularity and subscription campaign which was announced in the last issue of the Press has created quite a sensation among the ladies of this section and over a dozen have signified their intention of entering the campaign and trying for the Dodge Touring Car and other valuable prizes to be given away. As yet none of the candidates have really started in the race, but it is thought that the first of next week will find several active candidates at work. Ladies who would be the proud possessors of these valuable prizes, who have failed to send in their nominations, should do so at once so that no time will be lost in getting started, as those starting first have a distinct advantage over those waiting until the last minute to enter.

Subscriptions Count More Votes Now
Another imperative reason why all candidates should get started at once is that each and every subscription turned in on or before September 15th counts more votes than during any other time. An extra bonus of 50,000 extra votes is given on each and every ten dollars collected in subscriptions up to and including this date. Thus a one year subscription which averages 15,000 votes during the first period, only counts 5,000 votes during the closing period. It is readily seen therefore, just how important it is that the prospective candidates should get started at once, and take advantage of the extra votes allowed. The rules of the contest are so arranged that it is not the contestant who turns in the most money who wins, but the one who secures the largest number of votes. Thus it requires three subscriptions taken during the closing period to count the same number of votes now.

Several of the citizens of Marion and vicinity have been comparing this mammoth campaign with one of the smaller campaigns which was inaugurated here several years ago. This campaign is under the management of experienced circulation builders, and the rules are so arranged that each and every contestant may enter with the full knowledge that she will receive the prize to which she is entitled. No votes can be transferred or bought, so each contestant must depend on the subscriptions she takes herself, thus assuring fair play to all parties. Any lady not understanding these rules and who would like to enter may call the contest manager at the Press office and all details will be cheerfully explained.

Every Community Represented
Ladies on the Rural routes and smaller towns of the vicinity should not fail to send in their nominations at once as they have an equal chance with the contestants in the town. The majority of the readers of the Press are farmers, and all of them are interested in the paper so subscriptions should be easy to get in the Rural sections. So if your neighborhood is not clipping the nomination from this page and after filling it out mail at once to the Press office and the Contest Manager will call and issue supplies.

MASONS CELEBRATE 100TH ANNIVERSARY

MORGANFIELD, Ky.—Masonic Lodge, No. 66 celebrated its 100th anniversary Tuesday at the Masonic temple with a splendid barbecue lunch followed by an ice course. Entered apprentices, Fellowcraft Masons and members of the order of Eastern Star were present. Chairman T. B. Young recounted with a pardonable pride of its organization by Henry Clay in 1820. The original charter, though slightly damaged by fire, is framed and occupies a conspicuous place on the wall.

The chairman called on Rev. Lig-on for prayer and attorney Fowler, who gave a condensed account of his observations of the workings of Masonry while he was with the American expeditionary forces in France. Rev. Kirker discussed the centennial. Worthy Matron Mrs. W. M. Wright expressed her pleasure and appreciation of the banquet and the invitation and urged all masons to join the Order of Eastern Star. Mrs.

George A. Prentice, chaplain, gave a short historical sketch of the Masonic apron of Otho Beatty which was framed and hung on the wall, who was born in 1773, in Virginia, a son of Colonel William and Mary Logan Beatty, was a grand master of Hiram Lodge, Frankfort, Ky., in 1801. This lodge was established by George Washington's lodge, Alexandria, Va.

MARION REDS WIN FROM HAWFAW MINES

Thursday afternoon the Marion Reds defeated the Hawfa Mines team in a fairly exciting contest. Final score 7 to 2.

Hawfa led off by getting runners on second and third in the very first inning with no outs but Conyer pitched himself out magnificently. Hawfa again threatened to score a few in the fourth but were held to one run in that frame.

The Reds picked out a run or two along during the game, keeping well in the lead after the early innings.

J. H. ORME GIVES BARBECUE TO BALL TEAM

Last Wednesday evening Jas. H. Orme was host to the Marion Reds and a number of his friends at a barbecue he gave them in his grove south of town.

Mr. Orme never does anything by halves and this affair didn't hurt his reputation any as a host. To describe it quickly we will say that it was a real barbecue.

Among those present were, O. E. Guess, G. P. Roberts, J. I. Clement, Sam Gugenheim, Robert Cook, Dr. Lowry, T. J. Yandell, T. H. Cochran, J. Alvis Stephens, C. S. Nunn, J. W. Blue, Jr., A. C. INTERESTING LETTER FROM REV. ROBERT LEAR

I am glad to be at home once again to spend three days before leaving for Tenn. Memphis Conference for one more revival before the session of our Louisville Conference which convenes at Russellville September, 22. This will make eighteen revivals for me this past conference year, and I have witnessed hundreds of conversions and reclamations with more than 450 accessions to our church, with many other churches as well. Also four Epworth Leagues have been organized, one Ladies Aid Society, one young peoples Missionary Society, a number of titling cards have been signed, and some family altars have been erected.

My work for the past year has called me to five different states, and I now have a call from the sixth one. I have of course been very busy, but I have never enjoyed the work more, and I have never been better cared for in every way. The Lord has graciously blessed me in health, poured out His spirit on the congregations to whom I have preached and manifested His presence in great demonstration and power on many occasions. The people whom I have served have liberally contributed to my material needs and I have received many, many expressions of appreciation in words of the highest praise. It is a great thing to have an opportunity to preach, to sing, to do personal work, and to do many other necessary duties that go with the Christian ministry. And for this glorious privilege that has been mine for the past fourteen years that have been spent in the evangelistic field, I am devoutly grateful to my heavenly Father, and personally thankful to the brethren with whom it has been my good fortune to labor.

I hope this coming year to be able to give better service and a longer period of time to the places that I may be called. I think that in many cases our revivals close too soon after beginning. So let us pray that the divine Spirit of God may lead us in all of His work, and then go to the tasks of our appointed ministry for His glory, and the salvation of those for whom Christ willingly and victoriously shed His blood. "Be ye therefore followers of God, as dear children; and walk in love, as also Christ hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God."

ROBERT LEAR.

AUTOISTS ARRESTED AT MADISONVILLE.

About half of those summoned pleaded guilty and were fined $10. The others asked for a continuance which was granted.

The charges included driving automobiles without rear lights, with glaring headlights and with cut out open.

M. E. Smith of Repton was in town Thursday on business.

Agricultural Column

By G. M. GUMBERT

The average production of corn to the acre for the entire United States is but 26 bushels, yet in practically every section four times that quantity is frequently produced. Improvement of the quality of seed is the least expensive method of increasing the yield per acre, yet every year our farmers neglect this important task and many are actually guilty of planting nubbins taken from the crib just before planting time. There is each spring a scarcity of good seed corn. This condition is all the more regrettable because it need not exist, and it is much more serious than is commonly supposed because many do not fully realize the tremendous loss to themselves and the country due to planting inferior seed. A full stand of plants may be obtained from inferior seed, but the yield will not be the best possible.

The seed corn show I held last spring served to show that many Crittenden county farmers do not select their seed corn in the fall, consequently do not store it or test before planting and as a result, plant inferior seed which often results in a poor stand and low yield. Make seed corn gathering a special task. At corn ripening time drop all other business and select an abundance of seed corn. The process is too important to be conducted while hussling because it requires your entire attention. One or two days spent in gathering and preserving seed corn will increase your yields and will return you more profit than any other work you can do on your farm.

The only proper way to select seed corn is from the stalks standing where they grow, as soon as ripe and before the first hard freeze. As soon as the crops mature, go thru the field with a seed picking bag and husk the ears from the stalks that have produced the most corn without having any special advantages, such as space, moisture, or fertility. Avoid the large ears on stalks standing singly, with an unusual amount of space around them. Late maturing plants with ears which are heavy because of an excessive amount of sap should be ignored. Due to our abundant rainfall this year, much corn has shown a tendency to grow a tall stalk at expense of grain. All other things being equal, short thick stalks are preferable because they permit thicker planting, are not so easily blown or broken down and in general are more productive than slender ones. Avoid stalks that produce suckers. Select leafy stalks with ears not too high but which hang down at an angle affording drainage for the tips.

Store the seed in a dry place where there is free circulation of air, and in such a manner that ears do not touch each other. During warm weather moist ears heat or mildew in a very short time and for this reason should not be left in a sack or pile for even a day after gathering. The vitality of the seed may also be reduced by drying too quickly or freezing during storage. Binder twine can be used to support 15 or 20 ears and these strings can then be hung in the loft out of the reach of mice or rats.

I trust that our progressive farmers will select their seed corn this fall and exhibit their choice samples at our seed corn show next spring.

REPORT STRUCK OIL AT VICKSBURG

There is much excitement around Vicksburg as well as in Smithland over the finding of quantities of oil. Boring for oil began there last November and since a depth of 800 feet has been reached the men in charge have been very reticent about the results although it comes from a reliable source that oil has been struck. One of the men it is said, stated that they would have a real oil well in a few days. From inside reports it appears that the boring has been successful and the announcement in a few days that oil has been struck in paying quantities need not be a surprise.

Another oil rig has been installed on the other side of Salem and boring is to begin at once.—Livingston Enterprise.

DARK TOBACCO MEN FORM CORPORATION

HENDERSON, Ky.—Organization of a corporation to handle and market their crops, thus dispensing with the present systems, which they blame for the "ridiculous prices" of tobacco was launched here at an enthusiastic meeting of the Farm Bureau of the Second Congressional District.

It was attended by 200 farmers and tobacco growers from every county in the district.

The plan is to incorporate a company to be styled the Farmers Bureau Tobacco Company, having a capital stock apportioned to individual growers. The stock is to be sold to growers of tobacco in proportion of 100 to each five acres grown, and such stock to be guaranteed to pay six percent dividend annually.

The company is to acquire tobacco loose leaf houses, and no stock is to be sold until a sufficient amount has been subscribed to handle 60 percent of the dark tobacco in Kentucky.

W. T. Harris, Morganfield; Louis Hancock, Providence; Henry S. Berry, Owensboro, were appointed as a committee to draft articles of incorporation.

The new organization expects to be ready for business within sixty days.

MORROW PROCLAIMS "CONSTITUTION DAY."

Asks "Citizens to Rededicate Lives" To Guard Instrument.

Frankfort, Ky. — "Constitution Day," September 17th, was proclaimed today by Governor Morrow in unison with the Governors of other States, to commemorate adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

The proclamation follows:

"Upon the 17th day of September, 1787, the United States of America adopted the Constitution of our country. For more than one hundred and thirty years this, the greatest written instrument ever struck at one time from the brain of man, has bound us together as a people, has safeguarded our most cherished liberties; has shielded and defended us in our right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It has been the Rock of Ages on which the Republic builded. It found us a few people on the shores of one ocean. It has beheld and guarded the march of civilization across the wilderness beyond the mountains to the waves of another ocean. It has made possible the nation's gigantic strides of stalwart progress. "Under its influence we have passed in numbers one hundred millions, and under its safeguards and limitations, every man and woman has free chances and free opportunity in the freest land in all the world. To America it is the Ark of the Covenant—the Palladium of our liberty. It holds the promise of all the wonderful days to be.

Therefore, by the authority vested in me, I proclaim September 17th as Constitution Day, and request that all citizens of the Commonwealth shall on that day rededicate and reconsecrate their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor to the preservation of the Constitution of the United States of America, to the end that there shall be assured to our posterity the blessings which we have so freely enjoyed."

A Personal Letter

I have entered the contest to win the capital prize in the Big Subscription Contest now being conducted by The Crittenden Press, and owing to the fact that I will be unable to see each and every one in person to secure his renewal, or to solicit new subscriptions, I have decided to appeal to you by this method to give me your subscription, that I may be successful in securing the big prize—the Dodge automobile.

I especially ask my good friends who live at other places, both in and out of the county, to please send me their subscription for one, two or five years, for which I will promptly send receipt in full for all amounts so paid, and see that each one receives proper credit on the subscription books of The Crittenden Press.

It is my intention to call on as many of the people of Marion and Crittenden county as it possible for me to see(having my duties in the County Clerk's office to perform during the time), but, if I fail to see YOU, won't you please let me have your renewal, or new subscription, at once, because it would count for a greater number of votes, if received before the 15th of September, than if turned in during the last half of the Contest period, which ends September 30th.

I feel confident that if my friends and acquaintances in Marion, and elsewhere, who are now subscribers to the Press, and those who desire to take the paper, will give their subscriptions, I will win out in this contest.

Thanking you in advance for any favors that you may show me in this matter, and assuring you that same will be sincerely appreciated by me, I am,

Yours very respectfully,
(MISS) LEAFFA WILBORN.

WHOSE FAULT IS IT?

Engineer Boggs of the State Highway Commission says that the main reason the Sullivan route was decided on for the Federal Road was that Crittenden County had not legally put up any money toward building the road.

He inferred that the County Road Commission had slipped up on the proposition in not taking some action in time to get the muddle straightened out some months ago, which could have been easily done.

It is to be hoped that whenever the road is finally located that something will be done at once to put Crittenden in the running on the building of this magnificent road.

RUM ECONOMICS

Before the liquor question became a dead issue the prohibition orators and writers entertained themselves and others with tabulations showing what the money then spent for liquor would buy when diverted to other channels. Now comes a jeweler who gives out the information that the man who formerly spent $300 a year for rum can buy a carat diamond a year for his wife. But can he?

The statisticians have proven conclusively that much of the money which was spent for alcohol is now expended for candy and other sweets. The movie men say that their business has been boomed by the dimes and quarters which used to be the medium whereby the order to set 'em up again was made operative. Clothing dealers and furniture men give like testimony. The savings banks report huge increases. Travel by automobile and rail is breaking records. Babies' shoes are being bought as never before. The $300 has a long way to go before it arrives at the jewelry store and diamonds are going up.

Jewelry, the gem expert says further, is going into the home now, rather than to the jeweled finger and throat of the vamp who one time profited by the impulsive generosity of the man who looked on the red-eye whenever he was ready. Generosity no longer misguided, finds its natural outlet in buying sun-bursts and star-clusters for the domestic circle. But he overlooks a point which seems to have escaped the notice of commentators generally. That is the hang-dog effect of the hang-over in promoting peace offerings.

In the old days when a gentleman was so unfortunate as to become slightly stewed he felt that he owed his wife and family an apology. Wherefore he ordered flowers and candy and ornaments of gold and silver. The money so expended has never been calculated. But it loomed large in the overhead in figuring the high cost of acquiring a bun. A strictly sober man can be a tightwad and get away with it.—Louisville Post.

LETTER FROM J. W. CROWE

Our camp meeting is over, big preaching, big singing, big crowds, and a big time in general, but as far as visible results are concerned, there were few. We do hope and trust that much good was done that will yet show. It does seem to me that where so many people gather together for ten days, with three or four services a day, with three strong evangelists and large crowds, and at times two or three hundred folks in the crowd unsaved. There ought to be something good beyond the ordinary. There must be something very powerful in the way.

This conference year is almost closed. I will have one more round on my work; on next Saturday night and Sunday morning at Hebron, the second Sunday at Tolu, and on Tuesday after the second Sunday, the fourth quarterly meeting at Hurricane. Our P. E., Brother Hulise, will preach at 11 o'clock. Dinner on the ground. After dinner the Elder will preach again. On Wednesday night the 15th, he will preach at Tolu. Now brethren, one and all, if you love your church and the cause, and desire to see it prosper in every good work and way, come to these services and help us, and may the Lord help you.

The closing service for this year will be at Siloam the third Sunday morning, and from there to Conference at Russellville, Ky., Sept. 22. The Lord bless us, and may we live for Him and His glory and at last get to heaven.

FARM BUREAU NEWS

Don't forget the Farm Bureau meeting at the Court House Saturday at 1:30. This will be the last opportunity to hand in your order for fall seeds. All members are expected to be present to plan for our membership campaign which will reach every farmer in the county. Our meetings are not secret in any respect and we extend a standing invitation to all farmers to meet with us.

Here is a number of benefits to be derived from our organization.

1—Mutual assistance and protection.

2—A square deal from the law-makers.

3—An understanding of the condition of foreign markets, particularly in regard to tobacco.

4—An understanding of the condition of markets in this country to prevent a sudden drop like we had in hogs last summer.

6—An assurance of the cost of production of farm crops.

7—A position to purchase supplies cheaper.

8—The development of Crittenden county as a live stock and dairy community.

9—To make farm life so honorable, profitable and attractive that our boys and girls will be justified in staying on the farm.

10—To counteract this agitation against the high cost of food, and educate city people to the fact that it costs money and takes time and labor to raise a crop just the same as it does to make plows or wagons.

These are the aims of over 1000 counties in the United States. The realization of our aims have been gratifying and those farmers who are waiting to see whether they are going to do anything had better burst their shells and join us. Think it over and then act.

It takes a great deal of time and labor to keep this column going. It would benefit us all if the members would contribute original articles dealing with some phase of their farm problems. If you have met success in doing something in a different way let us profit with you.

FARMER FINDS RELIC OF HISTORIC INTEREST

OWENSBORO, Ky.—A relic of much historical interest in the shape of a metal medallion thought to have been struck in honor of the visit of Gen. Lafayette to America in 1824, has been found by John Miles, a farmer who lives on Nat Alsop's farm east of Owensboro. The medallion is about the size and weight of a silver dollar. One side bears the bust of Lafayette in relief, the other a French inscription, which, translated reads, Object of veneration and friendship at every visit. We cannot forget the misfortune of yesterday and the services which he rendered to the freedom of both worlds.

While it is possible that the medallion was struck by order of the French commune at the close of the eighteenth century, it is more probable that it was ordered by the American congress when at the age of 60, Lafayette returned to America, where honors and thousands of acres of land were bestowed upon him for his services to the young republic in the revolutionary war.

SEN. STANLEY TO BEGIN KY. SPEAKING SEPT. 11

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senator A. O. Stanley announced Saturday that he will open his speaking campaign in Kentucky at Greenville on the afternoon of Sept. 11. He will speak at Central City that night. He was asked by the Kentucky speaker bureau if these dates would be satisfactory to him and he accepted by wire.

IN MEMORIAM.

Bertha (Bradford) Tabor, daughter of Dave Bradford, was born March 27, 1900, and just as the sun set on Tuesday, August 3rd, she departed from this world. She leaves to mourn her loss, a husband, two small sons, Douglas, aged 2 years, Herbert, aged 4, a father, mother, one brother, four sisters and a host of friends.

She professed religion when quite young and united with the Presbyterian Church at Crayne, of which she was a member when she died.

She had been in bad health for several months with tuberculosis, all was done to relieve her suffering that loving hands could do, but God saw fit to take her from us. While we have lost a loyal friend, a devoted wife and mother, Heaven gains a brighter jewel.

Her funeral was preached at the Crayne church, in the presence of a large congregation of her friends and loved ones, by Rev. W. T. Oakley.

All that was mortal of Bertha was laid to rest in the cemetery near by. God bless her loved ones, and bring them all home to meet her in the land of peace.

Concealed in Earth's Bosom.

The earth conceals many wonderful objects, both natural and man-made that are being discovered from time to time. Remains of prehistoric animals and plants, skeletons and mummies, coins and jewelry, statues, old records, aboriginal implements and toys, even whole buried cities have been found from time to time. Mammoths have been unearthed whole in frozen Siberia. Their bones or those of their relatives, the mastodons, have been dug out in Alaska, in New York state not far from the Hudson river, and in New England.

A CANINE CUPID

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

The girl looked up from her book just in time to see a young man, in an immaculate white suit furiously chasing a forlorn looking dog, who had aroused his ire by running in front of his car. The car was a new and shining one and the young man who chased the dog was quite oblivious to the damage the wet road was doing to his white shoes. The rough-haired creature, yelping wildly, flew at last, as capture seemed near, straight up the bordered path to the veranda where the girl sat. For an instant his pleading eyes questioned hers, then the dog's bony frame leaped into her arms. "Well!" gasped the girl, as the irate young man followed threateningly into the garden.

"You've a lot to do, haven't you, pursuing a poor half-starved animal that dared annoy you for a moment by blocking your way?"

Indignation was in the girl's tone, in the flash of her eyes, and the flush of her cheeks, as she held the trembling beast close, regardless of her crisp whiteness. The strange young man, pausing to mop his perspiring brow, gazed at the girl, at first in answering indignation, then with a slow spreading grin.

The lean and ragged animal baring an inquiring eye nestled closer to the girl with a loving whine moistly affectionate, his tongue caressing her hand. "Poor doggie!" she murmured; "poor little hounded thing! I'll take you in this minute and give you such a meal as you haven't had in months."

"Then" asked the young man interested, "what are you going to do with him?"

The girl glanced defiantly into the man's mocking face.

"I'm going to keep this strange dog," she replied, "for my own. I thought about it this morning when I saw him searching around our back door. Only—" her tone was regretful—"he did look so homely."

"I don't care how homely Casey is," she said. "I shall befriend him."

"Casey?" asked the young man.

"His name from now on," the girl said. "He looks like 'Casey'."

The dog gave a furtive backward glance as she carried him indoors. To the surprised young man it seemed that the ugly mouth smiled. Reluctantly the white-suited one made his way down the flower-bordered path and into his waiting car. Reluctantly he looked back toward the vacated veranda. The young man also smiled.

Dulcie carried her dog into the kitchen. Ignoring the remonstrance of Mary Ann, she rifled the cupboards of chops and bones; to Casey her offering was but an appetizer. Dulcie added a pan of bread and milk—still wagging gratefully, the dog asked for more.

"It must have been ages since he had any food," she told Mary Ann. "Oh, you can't fill them kind up," the woman grumbled.

Dulcie showed her dog apologetically, that evening, to her father. "He is dreadfully homely," she admitted, "but he's affectionate and needs a home. I'm going to keep him."

"All right," the indulgent father replied; "but don't inflict his curtness upon me."

As she sat, that evening, with the dog in silent adoration at her feet, it seemed, unaccountably, that the white-flannelled figure of a man still occupied the step below. It was exceedingly curious how such a brief presence could haunt a place. Dulcie recalled the young man's good-natured acceptance of her rebuke—his whimsical smile. Then, idly, her eye caught an advertisement in the evening paper:

"Lost!" she read, "valuable Alredale puppy in vicinity of Park place this morning. Return to D. Benson, 2140 Elm avenue."

Dulcie stared down at "Casey."

"It's you!" she said. "This morning in Park place—valuable Alredale. There was nothing for it but to bring out her own car and take the dog over to Elm avenue. The question of ownership must be settled at once; but before the car had fairly stopped at the door "Casey" himself settled the question.

With the joyful bark of a dog restored to his own, he ran up the walk, then with remorseful affection returned coaxing the girl to follow. Casey pushed his way past the maid at the door, while Dulcie remained to await the coming of D. Benson.

A familiar white-suited figure swinging around the garden path, surprised a pleased wondering light of recognition in her eyes.

"You?" she exclaimed.

The young man bowed.

"Donald Benson at your service."

"I don't understand—" Dulcie faltered, but she was beginning to understand very well indeed.

"You see," he explained genially, "Sandy—that's Casey's real name—shook his strap and collar and strayed over to Park place this morning. When I tried to round him up with my car he expected a deserved thrashing and ran to you for protection. Sandy's a wise dog—and a lucky one." D. Benson added sadly, "You liked—Sandy."

"So I must give him up!" the girl said slowly.

"Tell you what," D. Benson exclaimed, "I'll bring Sandy over and leave him with you as often as you like."

Dulcie smiled. "And call for him again?" she asked.

The young man sighed a sigh of great content.

"I'll start bringing that dog over early tomorrow morning," he told her.

A Woman's House Plan.

It is really remarkable how few women architects there are. Every woman has a sneaking desire to build a house from her own plans. Occasionally one does, just so that she may have enough closets. Then she spends the rest of her life looking in them for burglars.—Life.

Painting.

The powers exerted in the mechanical part of the art have been called the language of painters; but we may say, that it is, but poor eloquence which only shows that the orator can talk. Words should be employed as the means, not as the end; Language is the instrument, conviction is the work.—The Discourses of Sir Joshua Reynolds.

Juvenile Hermit.

Amos was a quiet, staid child, inclined to be too much by himself, his mother thought. Seeing him playing in the back yard alone, she asked him why he didn't go and play with some of the other boys occasionally. "Oh," replied the child, "they disturb my think. I like to be alone with me."

Straight talk on Cream Separators by

C. A. ADAMS

Marion, Ky.

NO MATTER what anyone may claim, there is only one speed at which a cream separator should be turned in order to get all the cream and cream of uniform thickness.

That's the speed plainly indicated on the crank of every separator, of whatever make.

Full speed is the only assurance of full capacity and full efficiency.

Every De Laval now has a Bell Speed-Indicator. The bell warns the operator if the separator is turned too slowly. There can be no mistake about it.

The Bell Speed-Indicator adds nothing to the price but much to the value of the De Laval Cream Separator.

Come in, examine the machine and see how the Bell Speed-Indicator works.

THE LITTLE GIRL

By CARLA F. ROSENTHAL

(© 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Cast of characters:
Little Girl.
Little Girl's Mother.
Little Girl's Mother's Friend.
Clerk.

Scene: Millinery store. Little Girl trying on a hat.

Little Girl's Mother—Now, Dorothy, you must select it yourself. I won't say a word. (To Clerk)—It's her birthday today and I told her that as a birthday present she might select her own hat. (Tries on blue one.) How do you like that, Dorothy? (Tries on pink one.) And how do you like this one?

Little Girl (looks critically at both)—The blue one is pretty, mamma.

Little Girl's Mother—Uh, h'm. (To Friend)—Don't you think that the pink one is sweet? Aren't those streamers lovely?

Little Girl's Mother's Friend—Beautiful!

Little Girl (doubtfully)—I don't believe I care very much for streamers.

Little Girl's Mother (to Friend)—And don't you think the shape is pretty? Doesn't that curve look well on Dorothy?

Little Girl's Mother's Friend (enthusiastically)—It's just as becoming as it can be!

Clerk—It is pretty, and it looks well on her, too. The color is so becoming to her.

L. G. M.—Yes, it looks nice on her, but—I don't know, I'm afraid it won't go well with some of her dresses. It's a trying color, you see, and besides I'm afraid it will fade. I had a blue dress once, yes, just about that shade, and I wore it on a hot, sunny day, and—it was a pretty dress, and quite a lot of trouble to make—and first thing you know it was all faded! If it had faded evenly I wouldn't have minded so much, but it was so queer and streaky—I was so mortified! (To friend) You remember the dress, Elizabeth.

L. G. M. P. (nodding)—Oh, yes! You mean the shirred one with the sash?

L. G. M.—No, it wasn't that one. You see, I have had several blue dresses. This one was plaited, and had little buttons. Made up your mind yet, Dorothy?

Little Girl (holding blue one in her hand)—I think this color's lovely.

Angle Lee had one this color once.

L. G. M. (laughing)—Yes, I remember. It lasted for about two days. Here, child, try the pink one on again. Turn around so that mother can see. Yes, that's nice. (To Clerk) Don't you think that is nice?

Clerk—They are both very becoming. She can't make a mistake which ever one she takes.

L. G. M.—Well, I want her to be satisfied. She is the one to wear it, and besides, it's her birthday, you know, so I told her she could select it. Now this pink—

Little Girl (decidedly)—I don't like the streamers, mamma.

L. G. M.—The streamers? Why, child, that's the prettiest part of it! (To Friend)—Don't you think the streamers are pretty, Elizabeth?

L. G. M. P.—Indeed I do! I remember when I was a little girl just about Dorothy's age I was just crazy to have a hat with streamers.

L. G. M.—You know, Dorothy, you're an odd little girl sometimes. Now most children would be delighted with those streamers. But if you don't want them—I'll tell you what we'll do—we'll cut them off! (To clerk): Couldn't we cut them off?

Clerk—Why, yes, you might do that, or else, if you prefer, you might just loop them up, or tie them in a pretty bow.

L. G. M.—Oh, yes, that's what we'll do. You wear it the way it is for a time, and then when you get tired of it we'll just loop them up prettily somehow. It'll make it an altogether different hat. Now, Dorothy, I don't want to hurry you, but you know we've got a lot of errands to do yet. (To clerk): She's going to have a party. I think it's nice, don't you, to keep up these little celebrations?

Clerk—Yes, it's lovely. I think she is a very lucky little girl.

L. G. M.—I sometimes think that she doesn't realize how nice she has it. Children don't, you know. Well, little girl, which is it to be? We mustn't take too much of this nice lady's time. (To Friend): Oh, I do love this pink hat! It would look so exquisite on her.

Well, Dorothy?

Little Girl—I like the blue one, but if you like the pink one better, mamma, I'll take that.

L. G. M.—You're the one to wear it, you know, Dorothy. None of us is going to say a word. (To Friend): I think it's such good training for children to get to know their own minds. You're sure you like the pink one, Dorothy?

Little Girl—Um h'm.

L. G. M.—And you won't be sorry after you get it home? (Dorothy is silent.)

I. G. M.—Because you know you've selected it all yourself! (To Clerk): Well, we will take this one. Thank you so much for all this trouble we've made you. But it will be such a pleasure to her hereafter to think she selected it all herself.

(Exit Mother, Little Girl and Friend. Mother carrying pink hat to bag.)
